Doctor Jenkins's effort was masterful, It sld the large audience for more than an our. He said in part:

DR JENKINS'S REMARKS

DR JENKINS'S REMARKS.

"Two men may serve the cause of truth, the cause of Christianity at very great distance of time and place and in very different environment and still be near together in achievement and still under the hand of him who gathers the planets into systems, or draws the rain-drops into clouds and storms, be brought to serve his world-wide, age-long purpose. Latter and Campbell were placed in very different problems. Luther was in the age just awakening from the sloth of centuries; Cambbell was in the midst of a great scientific and religious activity. Luther was both into a united church; Campbell, into a divided church. Luther was seeking the destruction of the authority of this unity; Campbell was bent on the union of a number of divided authorities. And, yet, with all the difference of time and circumstance, there must have been, under the guillance of God, a certain harmony in the activity of these world-affecting men. How much therefore the efforts of these two, separated by three centuries of development, were unlike in their contribution to the common propress of Christian purity in thought and life, its my task in this lecture, if I can, to den their contribution to the common pro-cress of Christian purity in thought and life, t is my task in this lecture, if I can, to de-promine. "We believe that the church on the whole is purer, better, more Christilke in the Twontieth than in the Skateenth Century, and in the Skateenth than in the Second or evoe in the First; that it is nearer the ideal of the master in St. Louis or Warrensburg than in Cochath or in Ephesus. This is not to say that it passes beyond the theoretical apostolic church, but beyond the practical; not beyond the primitive church; not beyond the primitive church; not beyond the apostolic and Christian ideal, but beyond the Jewish, Greek and Roman attempts at realization." We believe that the church on the whole

MORNING SESSION

The Reverend George L. Peters of Mound City read a thirty-minute review of Doctor Jonkins's night lecture. Doctor Riemarison of Kansas City, and Doctor Garrison of St. Louis dissented from the lecture in some points. The looked-for breeze came, however, when Doctor W. T. Moore of the Christian College of Columbia, denied in a larne measure, the right of private interpretation of the Scriptures, as set forth by Doctor Jenkins in his lecture of the previous evening, Doctor Moore said:

"I do not believe in absolute private judgment must be supreme. We must allow the Christian community to say for the Individual what is generally believed.

The venerable doctor stirred up the tribes, but received hearty applause. The closing paper of the morning was by 0. W. Lawrence on "Elements of Power in the Pulpit."

Doctor Green of William Jewell College delivered the afternoon lecture, "The Ministerial Education." Doctor Green made the hit of the day. The general discussion was opened by the Reverend L. J. Marshall, the successor to the pulpit of Alexander Proctor. Doctor Dungan of Canton, the Reverend J. A. Dearborn of Kansas City, H. E. Monser, general evangelist, and T. A. Abbott, corresponding secretary of the Missouri Christian Convention, followed the Reverend Mr. Marshall in the discussion. One of the conspicuous men present is the Reverend C. S. Belvidere, N. J., April 14.-Patrick Flynn 52 years old, known as "the miser and her-mit of Harker's Hollow," was found dead in his hovel. He had not been seen for several days, and neighbors entered his house and found him sitting in an impro-vised chair, his head on one side. Flynn had never been married and all the Fignn had never been married and all the money that came into his possession he hoarded. He would not trust any of the banks, but kept all his money in the rookery he called home. The house was barricaded front and back, and no one could have broken into it with a siedge.

It was known that the old man had money, and when the searchers broke open his trunk they found a pile of bank bills covered with mold. Out of the old rags on which he slept many pieces of gold and silver few. There was an old can in one corner. It had some musty flour in it, and in the bottom was a bag of sliver coin. In the weatherboards, in the chimney, under the rafters, in fact, wherever the messearched they found money. When counted the money found amounted to nearly $1.000 in gold, sliver, bills and pennies.

It was learned that he had a sister living in New York, and she was at once telegraphed for. The sister had been to see Patrick last summer. She says she knows the money found is small part of the wealth of her brother and ordered the search resumed.

CLEAR UP MYSTERY

Omaha Police Hot on Trail of Man Accused of Murdering His Wife

CORPSE IS NOT YET FOUND.

Under Sweating, Have Made Admissions About Crime.

Omaha, April 14-Chief of Police Donahue has received information from Cheycune that Frank E. Knight, wanted here in connection with the mysterious disappearance of his wife, was seen in that city last night. The information states that Jean's Dusenberry, an acquaintance who is living at her last evening and was with her for some time. Every effort is being made to apprehend him.

The letter in possession of the police, written by Knight to Mrs Stiles, mother of Mrs Dusenberry, contains the following:

"I took your advice and I think I cluded the police all right. It was Meil's (Malvin Dusenberry) giving me away by saying I was going to store the trunk—that did the business. I send you a letter to put in the box for me to keep the authorities thinking I am still in Omaha. Mrs Knight Intended the dose for me, but I caught on and changed the cups, and you know the rest."

The letter enclosed to be mailed was a decoy to cover his tracks and throws no light on the alleged crime.

Mrs. Stiles called on Knight at his work after the investigation was begun by the police and, it is said, advised him to leave at once. In his haste he did not stop to secure his sailary, and the letter-states that an order for the amount will be sent to Mrs. Stiles.

Unier Donahue stated to-day that Mrs. Stiles and her son, Malvin Dusenberry, who were placed in the "sweat box" again early this morning, have made confessions which are sufficient to convict Knight, should he be captured. The Chief refused to make public the nature of the second of the control of the second public the nature of the confessions, but said he was satisfied with the result of the "sweating," and that the information secured would assist materially in the cap-the "sweating," and that the information secured would assist materially in the capture of Knight.

To-day it was learned that Knight informed Maivin Dusenberry early last week that he would want his horse and wagon some night during the week, and wolld probably want it all night. Dusenberry drove past the Knight home Saturday evening, but, seeing nobody there, took the horse to the barn. About 10:20 o'clock that night Knight went to Dusenberry's home and woke him up, saying he wanted the rig at once.

and wose min up, saying he wanted the light once.

Dusenberry says he hitched up the horse and rode to Knight's house, where he left the rig with Knight, and returned to his room. The police believe, however, that Dusenberry accompanied Knight on his drive.

Disenberry accompanies things on and drive.

Late this afternoon Chief Donahue learned that a wagon was seen late Saturday night in the vicinity of a vacant property near Florence Lake, where Knight lived about a year ago. The locality is also familiar to Dusenberry, and the police are now making a thorough search of the premises, which contains twenty acres, with the hope of finding the body of the missing woman.

The Mississippi Valley Trust Company was thronged during banking hours yesterday with hundreds of creditors of the J. J. The lines in front of the paying tellers' windows were long, and made up of persons apparently representing all classes of society.

Up to the closing hour over 800 checks were cashed. These ranged from $1$ to $55$. In many instances the tellers were not acquainted with holders of checks, and refused payment on them until the parties acquainted with holders of checks, and refused payment on them until the parties were identified. This caused some confusion and delay, as the person returning with some one to identify him usually wanted first place in the line.

Strion steak has advanced from 12½ cents to 15 cents per pound, and there have been similar advances in the price of other kinds of meat. The retail meat dealers think the present prices will be maintained and that there will be no further increase. The recent advance is due to the packers, who have increased the cost of meat to the retailers. The packers give no explanation for their action.
